Happy Holidays From CVR – The attorneys and staff of Cunningham, Vogel & Rost, P.C. wish everyone a safe and happy Holiday Season!

Red Light Camera Ordinance Upheld - In City of Creve Coeur v. Nottebrok, the Eastern District of the Missouri Court of Appeals upheld a red light camera ordinance enacted by the City of Creve Coeur against a due process challenge. The court found that the ordinance was a civil ordinance, not subject to "the heightened procedural protections required by the Fifth, Sixth, and Eighth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution," because the language of the ordinance made clear it was intended to be civil by calling a violation an infraction, rather than a crime; the ordinance was enacted under the City's police power for regulating public safety; the sanction was merely a fine rather than points on the car owner's driver's license; and the City was not required to prove the car's owner was operating the car at the time of the violation, but imposed liability on the owner rather than the driver, as with parking tickets. In addition, the ordinance allowed the car owner to appeal by showing that the car was in the intersection due to one of the exceptions permitted by the ordinance, such as yielding right-of-way to an emergency vehicle.
